ALASKA RAILROAD FLAGSTOP SERVICE

The Alaska Railroad's Aurora Winter Train travels from Anchorage through the Mat-Su Valley, stopping in the charming town of Talkeetna, and continues onward to the wilderness of Denali National Park before reaching its terminus in the Interior city of Fairbanks. Travelers on this journey traverse the Alaska Range and enjoy stunning views of panoramic vistas, wildlife, river valleys, and rocky gorges. On clear days, travelers may even see an incredible view of Denali, North America's tallest peak.

Travelers may also choose to ride the Hurricane Turn Train the first Thursday of each month. The Hurricane Turn travels north from Anchorage past Talkeetna, to the backcountry where passengers may access hunting, skiing and remote cabins - or stay onboard to enjoy the views. Both trains provide flagstop service along the 55-mile stretch north of Talkeetna to Hurricane.
